

AMERICAN HIGH-PERFORMANCE BUILDINGS COALITION

Who We Are

The American High Performance Buildings Coalition (AHPBC) represents members of the building and construction value chain that support performance based green building systems, standards and their implementation.

Our mission is to support and promote green building codes, standards, rating systems and credits that are transparent, data-driven, supported by science, and performance-based. We support systems developed in conformance with American National Standards Institute (ANSI) or International Standards Organization (ISO) consensus processes.

We support the common objective of improving energy efficiency and environmental performance in buildings. The purpose of the coalition is not to endorse or oppose any particular green building rating system.

Our Goals

- Bring diverse building and construction industry stakeholders together to execute the group's mission with respect to the development and implementation of green building standards.
- Advocate for green building standards that align with the coalition's mission when considered for adoption by federal, state and local governments.
- Become an effective voice in influencing development and voluntary adoption of green building standards through education, and outreach.
